

1. How would you change your ER diagram if: the agent did not have a standard commission rate, instead the commission could be different for each transaction?

I would change my diagram so that commission is its own entity and it has its own commission check ID and the attribute commission Rate so now the commission checks and rates could be different for each check.

2. If you needed to list HOA fees, where would that information be added?

I would add the HOA fees to the property entity; this is because they are typically associated with a whole property regardless of if they are houses or apartments storing it with the property is the best way to do it.

3. How would you change your diagram if you needed to store historical information for the salary of the admin employees?

I would change my diagram so that there was a salary details entity associated with managers that would keep track of their original salary and increase amounts and increase dates so that the history of their salary could be figured out.

4. Based on previous assignments, employees may work in many of the offices or they could be stationary. Can you change your design to include a schedule for these employees? For each employee you need to know which days of the week they work in which office and their start/end time.

I could change my diagram to accommodate for this change by creating a separate entity called schedule that stores the dates the employee super class worked and then also their start and end times along with the office ID to track everything with their needs.
